

EIA Update

September 6, 2011

The premise in Johnson County is still under quarantine. The horses that were positive are waiting for a quarantine release test 60 days after all of the positive horses were removed from the premises. The owner may test the horses before the sixty days for her own information. Either way if another positive horse shows up then the quarantine release period will be extended another 60 days after that positive is removed. The only contact premises to the Johnson County premises had all negative tests and is awaiting a 60 day quarantine release test.

All the horses in Van Buren County have been tested and are awaiting a 60 day quarantine release test.
